

Media, PA— Today, Congressman Joe Sestak (D-PA) spoke at Rotary Clubs in Haverford and West Chester where he talked about the work he has done in Congress and answered their questions and listened to their concerns. As Vice-Chairman of the House Small Business Committee also emphasized the importance of small business in the region. — “Over the last 3 years, we have lost approximately 600 small businesses in our region and one out of five manufacturing establishments,” said Congressman Sestak. “My job in Washington is to do everything I can at the federal level to boost our region’s economy and create more good-paying jobs. We want our kids to be able to stay here and raise their families.”

Congressman Sestak spoke about how the last election was truly about how the nation needed to work together in a bipartisan way to reprioritize our national investments. He emphasized we must focus more on affordable, accessible, adequate healthcare and a high quality education in order to lead to the right workforce for an economy that can reverse the $9 trillion in debt that we have incurred over the last 6 years. While Congressman Sestak talked about each of these issues, he then went on specifically to talk about small businesses, which create almost all new jobs and how we need to attract the right businesses to the district with the well trained and educated workforce.

Congressman Sestak has a strong commitment to creating jobs and helping small business. As Vice Chairman of the Small Business Committee, Rep. Sestak has worked to support new and small businesses through open access to loans, credit and capital, advocates fair and true tax relief for small business, and work to reduce onerous regulations and paperwork.

Congressman Sestak cosponsored the Family Small Business Tax Fairness Act to streamline small business joint-tax filings. He also voted in favor of the H.R. 976, Small Business Tax Relief Act--a bipartisan bill with $1.3 billion in tax cuts to help small businesses invest in new equipment and hire new workers.

Congressman Sestak’s most recent piece of legislation passed in committee – the Small Business Entrepreneurial Development Programs Act of 2007 - enhances two critical Small Business Administration (SBA) Entrepreneurial Development programs: Small Business Development Centers (SBDCs) and the Service Corps for Retired Executives (SCORE).

“These Small Business Administration programs are so important to local businesses,” added Congressman Sestak. “We know that entrepreneurial development assistance programs work. Businesses who receive SBA entrepreneurial assistance are twice as likely to succeed. In addition, every federal dollar spent on entrepreneurial development generates seven dollars in increased tax revenue.”

Congressman Sestak has held two Economic Summits in the district. The first Economic Development Summit brought together several hundred stakeholders from across the District to participate in discussions to address the key issues facing workforce development, access to capital, business development and growth, community economic development, and economic development strategies. The second summit focused on encouraging economic development by connecting local businesses with federal, state, and local resources and programs. This summer he hosted a summit on women in the workplace and business with House Small Business Committee Chairwoman Nydia Velazquez (D-NY).
